The DEVONSHIRE HISTORY

PUB WITH A 'NoToRIOUS' PAST.

The Devonshire, previously known as the Duke of Devonshire is more than 200 years old and is a listed grade 2 building. This handsome stone-built pub would not look out of place adjacent to the village green in a Peak District village but it is where it is, on the busy A6 through Belper. Originally a centre for the nail-making industry since Medieval times, Belper expanded during the early Industrial Revolution to become one of the first mill towns with the establishment of several textile mills; as such, it forms part of the Derwent Valley Mills World Heritage Site.

In the early 1980s, the pub gained national notoriety when it introduced topless barmaids for a time.

It's now a period travel inn steeped in history and has been brought up to date with quirkiness and peculiarity by former anti-pasti punk band lead singer Martin Roper, who also runs the Exeter Arms and the Old Silk Mill pubs in Derby.

Wire Works 'Caduro' whisky is a unique vatting of their core lightly-peated Derbyshire single malt matured in a combination of American and French oak. Inspired by its location between the Shining Cliff woods and the River Derwent, in what was the former Johnson & Nephew wire works factory, it has provenance and heritage.
